

(Did she like it here at Canton?)

Yeah. She had a lot of friends. That's where she finished. And then she went to Haskell and finished there, and then she finished her training over there and I guess she joined the WACs. She wrote and said she was going to join. After she joined, then her niece went and joined. And they come home here. And this man came and said, "I'm looking for the big niece and the little aunt," he used to call them. My daughter's short, you know, but Juanita is a big woman. "I'm looking for the big niece and the little aunt." Juanita was in the WACs too. They both finished school at the same time and they went to Haskell and finished their training and I guess they just decide to join. And I was glad of it.

(Have you seen Juanita lately?)

Yeah. She's getting along all right. She said, "I'm going to have to be making checks about the fifteenth." I said, "You make mine first and send it," I told her. She just laughed. "I have to go by the alphabet," she said. A-B-C-D--mine is way down there--Howling Buffalo. I'm on the list as "Howling Buffalo."

(One more question on these families living together. We've talked about some families where married kids would be living with their folks. But have you ever known a case where two sisters and their husbands might live together in the same house--?)

Two sisters? No, I never did. They have their own tents. They have separate tents. They don't live together.

(Would a man and woman ever go and live with their aunt or uncle?)

No. When they ain't got no folks, they go out for themselves. They don't live with nobody.

OLDER PEOPLE LIKE A GRANDCHILD TO STAY WITH THEM

(Well, what about a man and his wife--let's say like if your husband had lived till all of your kids were out and married, and there were just the two of you--would you be lonely in that kind of situation and maybe want some grandkids to stay with
