

my cousin, we used fight over the coffee grinder. And they used to give sugar, coffee, and sugar. Flour, and salt meat. And they used to give soap--used to be yellow. Let me see, what else did they used to give away.

(Did they ever give them any cattle live?)

Yeah, they used to kill--different districts, like that other one I was talking about, that why they used to live around. At Whirlwind, I was talking about. That were they used to--the ones that live around there and some of them around there and Watonga. Some of them at Geary. Geary different places. Cantonment, Canton--used to.

(Did you say Cantonment?)

Yeah, that was an army camp long time. They call it Cantonment. There was an Indian school there. But it's closed. Northwest from Canton.

Where there the dam is.

(Now what about these cattle, did each person get them or did each family--)

No, they divide that meat. They kill them and they cut the meat out--they used to cut it--I don't know how big. For each family. I don't know how long they get them. Every week. Every month. I don't know. I was still a little girl when they quit giving them. I was about ten or I don't know about nine. They quit giving them food and they had to start buying their own.

(Did they ever get any clothes or tools?)

Long time, before my day, they used to give them clothes, blankets, dress goods. Used to give them cattle, wagon, but they didn't use to after I know. But long time they say that. They used to tell me they give them those things.
