

(Did this Tom Hawk ever learn Arapaho or did he know how to speak Arapaho?)

No. He didn't learn no Arapaho.

(Did you ever hear him talk his own language?)

I don't know who he would talk to!

(He'd just talk in English with you all, then?)

Yeah, he talk English.

(Well, do you want to sing some of those songs, now?)

Yeah.

(Sings about 3 songs. Starts third or fourth one and quits, saying that she's already sung it. Then starts another one to tune of "I Don't Care if You're Married...")

(Did you say they used some of them in the Round Dance?)

Yeah, they used some of them.

(You mean they just took them from the Rabbit Dance?)

Yeah, they took them from the Rabbit Dance.

(Well, this one you just got through singing--was this one of the ones that Tom Hawk brought down?)

Yeah. All these songs.

(Sings another song.)

There's lot of these Rabbit Songs, but you know they got them and it's just like they make them sound different--a little different from what they used to be. And I just almost forget all of them.

(When you say they make them sound different--who do you mean is making them sound different?)

These that's using them in the Round Dance. They sing them faster than they used to, you know. They used to sing them slow so they could keep
