

talked among themselves what they gonna do. "What we going to do about it?" Well, the older one--he's the first Twin Boy--we call them "Twin Boys"--they derived from the Sun God. Therefore they was possessed with lots of power. Divine Power. Mysterious power--they possess that kind. "Let's see if anybody's living in there." So they talk from the bluff to the tipi: "We want our wheel! Get our wheel off! We want out little wheel on top of your tipi poles." A man spoke from inside. "Come in here first. Come inside here first and I'll get your wheel off." So they talked together and they both went in there. And as they went in there they noticed bags hanging all over the walls of the tipi--different bags of something. They sat down and they talked. There was a man and wife in the tipi. He said, "Boys, first I want to talk to you before I let that wheel off. But before we start talking, wife, untie that bundle over there next to the entrance--untie that bundle." And they just noticed the woman go up there and untie it. And when she untied it, it just dropped to the ground and there was smoke--just dense smoke just fell to the ground and it was dark--pitch dark. And the younger boy, the last Twin Boy, said, "Brother, I can't breathe. I'm smothering. I'm smothering. What we going to do?" So the older Twin Boy said, "Say like I do--what I say-- (repeats Kiowa phrase several times)--"above our heads, above our heads"--that means "above our heads!" (says it in Kiowa again). And the smoke rose above--just above their heads. So they just could breathe. And that man sitting up there--they don't know who he was, but he was some kind of a god. Some kind of god. Maybe he might be the devil--I don't know! Could be--because he had lot of smoke! And therefore, the man said, "Look at the boys--how they're getting along." "Oh, it's not hurting them--the smoke's above their heads." "It is? Untie that middle bundle--bag." So she untied another. And then it was worse than the first one. And they repeated the same words. And he said, "Untie another one on top of it. Untie it." He's
