

they give me some money. So, we got cold pop over here. Children, do your stuff. Do your stuff, roll on the ground and cry. (Interruption) get that--caught me on that electric there. Plug it in. You got to fight fire with fire. So, black coffee, man. That's what it takes to fight fire. No chili though, no hot stuff. One time, they were have a pow-wow down Frontier City, and I, we had a long dance all afternoon. It was getting late. Boy, we wanted to break. My brother, down there, he done me wrong, Mr. McKinsey. He come over there, and "Hey, Bobby, I know you're hungry, here." He gave me a sandwich. You know, he got me a hot link sandwich and put some more pepper on it. Besides, I took a big bite of it. Boy, my shoe strings come loose. Boy, it was hot. He really fixed me. I got it in for him. He's here today, the great jay hawker, Wichita, Kansas, Bob McKinsey. Here's a beautiful necklace. It's got cut beads in it. Boy, it's really pretty. You could buy you a necklace. Then, give it to your girl frined when your wife's not looking, pretty one, see? Real cut beads, Taylor, that's only man I know that could do things like that. I went with a Brother Know you (?) man, Reverend Know you in Washington. And we couldn't find him. I went look for--my brother-in-law him and I got to watching. I went to look for him, and he was in a dry goods store buying dry goods. And after we got back home, about two weeks later, I asked his wife, "Did you get those pretty dry goods?" She says, "What dry goods?" But my brother-in-law passed them on someplace. (Laughter) Oh, he was--I think they were about around three or four dollars a yard. Boy, he had a arm full. Tribal money went to dry goods. (Laughter) I had to pay part of the expenses. He put price of bread for thirty-five cents. Believe it or not, he ate his bread up, and for another slice of bread in one of the restaurants we was eating. That lady took his ticket and added thirty-five cents. (Laughter) She said, "Let me have that menu. I'm going to show the tribal--the general council what it cost to come up here." I don't know whether he'd gotten it or not. Now, all you singers, you could make your women do the Scalp dance and all that. Following the Scalp Dance, we're going to have a Gourd Clan program here this afternoon. I met some of the gourd dancers in Anadarko this morning as they were coming up
