

(Lewis Ross)

Lewis and ah his mother---

(His mother.)

Died in 1860.

(Frances.)

Frances, Frances Cole.

(She was Cole, before she married?)

Yes, she was a Cole. That was nice where they put those things on those stones.

(Who are these people that are in the back of us?)

Now that is un--- That's when I went, unveil, to Chief John Ross, they wanted to know what kin I was to Robert. And I said he is first cousin of my mother's. See his was her, his daughter that married the Cobb. That was curator before this lady is down there now.

(Muriel Cobb.)

They always horn in on the other fellow. And his wife, she was a Thornton.

(Frances Daniel Thornton.)

Ah-hum. Wife of Robert Bruce Ross.

(Oh! I've heard . . .)

So you see. He, was mother, grandson, you see of the Chief and his dad was Uncle Allen, you know. And his, his brother Rufus is married, who's married Aunt Lizzie. More kinfolks, you know.

(Elizabeth Ross?)

Ah-hum. That little picture hanging right there, oh, yeah! I said, if they wanted to put those thing on there, why didn't they make it lower.

See, over here is ah-great-grandfather and my auntie over there.

(That's where they made the mistake and put Douglas Jane.)
