

smart. They grew up in pitiful ways. They just have to stay at Riverside, and when everybody went home...because their mother was sick, she had t.b. And her mother had them separated, and it just broke up their home. And she wouldn't take care of after she did that. And these four kids had to grow up at Riverside. When they got old enough to go to Concho, they went to Concho and they stayed there. And Joe's got a niece there, and they baby sat for her, for whatever little money you know. They just grew up in schools, what I'd say. And they learned to work and sew. They fine kids, I'm proud of them.

(Where is your other son?)

David's in California. He was working at Douglas. But he re-joined in the Navy. So, I don't know...he's going to have a family pretty soon. He wants his wife to come here and stay with us, in case sister goes away. We need somebody here. And I don't know how I would get along with Francis because, oh, he drinks so bad. I can't be bothered with people like that.

Drunks, I can't hardly stand them, you know.

(Do you and Joe live on that two thousand dollars?)

That's it. No kind of assistance from nobody, nowhere. Disability, nothing. I take it to the welfare, can you do something for him. No, we can't do nothing for him. He can't even go to his lease man to get a little assistance from there. No, I done got my land. I can't help you. You got to wait until January.

(How much does he get from that place at Hydro?)

He gets...how much do you all get a Hydro? But he divides it in two, his sister comes in there. He don't get much.

Joe: I get a little over $600.

That's his share. And he can't get a dime, he can't even get ten dollars from them to buy groceries. Cause the office wrote him a strict letter, he said, I done got my letter. The reason why they did that, cause when our daughter died, my son-in-law here don't have no land, no kind of income. His daddy was a white man, but his mother was a full blooded Chickasaw. But they don't have no income, just what he works for is all he gets. Then he had these two children. But Legreth's in the service now, he's at Da Nang. And my granddaughter's at Mt. View,
