

my a house built. But this other way, if they turn us loose, oooh, there'd be a lots of Indians walking around on the highway! That's one bad thing. But the office not helping us out anything. They're not. I can't see what they done for me. Only the hospital. That's separate. But they really have been good to him and my daughter, they really did take care of her. Because he's a Chinese, you know. He's a real good doctor, and he really believes in working on them. Yea, he sure graft that leg good, but they had to take it off--her other one. And he was really....oh, she stayed there a month, and he really took care of her. She burned herself, that car ran over her. But somebody told me that it was a tire burn. You know, that tire burned her.

But we did put hot bottle on her, but she didn't have no feeling. She went to sleep and she burned it. Third degree burn. Besides....she don't have no feelings in her knee. Said it would be a long time before...it didn't break the skin, or anything. But it just made a big blue spot. But the way she burned it, she opened it, and all that black blood ran out of her. Only place she's got, is right here where she's fat. I think where she's fat, it's hard to feel. And she's big..She said, if I was skinny it would have broke my leg. It's a good thing I got a fat leg.

(Some discussion with Joe about his leg amputation.)

Oh, I tell you, they butchered his leg (Joe's). It was another bunch of doctors. Oh, they butchered his leg. They told him if they would cut it and take a nerve out, that he wouldn't get no circulation in his foot. They cut him there. Oh, he suffered. And then they cut him again, and one leg, the man from Lawton, cut the other leg off. They did it themselves, over here, and they butchered him. And he felt it. And then they gave him some kind of electric shock in his leg, and it would start the blood to circulate. And he said that was the painest thing they ever done to him. He said it hurt. They had to hold him down. They just butchered him. Pretty soon, I begin to think they just experimenting on him. That was the other doctors. Oh, they done everything. They tell him, well, Joe, when you get out of here, there's going to be an artificial Joe going
