

him, you know. Well, try to get at it, I tell him I think you people ought to have...we got our leader here. Maybe three more, committee like, like a tribal council. We have a chairman and he leads. I tell him that's what you people ought to have. I told him, you could get things going. He's leader of our tribe, take us to Pawnee, all that. Well, I don't know. He's supposed to have three man on his side. I don't know who they are, he never did say. Kind of get in a mess, but I tell him, it's all right. You can't remember things, what to do.

Now that got this other building over there, I think they call it inter-tribal, Gracemont. My niece, I tell them that. You people get some young boys to take care of your place. I don't know. Kind of hard, you know. Well, we go both places. Like there's no difference.

(Where is the other place?)

Gracemont. You know. About a mile, you cross that creek, go west about a mile, quarter this way. They got a building there they built. The other place, down at Willie Campbell's. You see, there's the thing, both places, in a way, they give us right to use the grounds, but we haven't got no kind of agreement. We don't have it. We got it there, just to use. We don't have no right. Just every little things going on. Ain't none of our place, the tribe. Bill, he owns that place. He's the one that owns it. Some time, people come around, intoxicated, you know, come by, I tell them many times, you know tribe tell us not to go around places like that, something going on, don't go there. That's what they tell me. Go somewhere else. I seen them Caddos, they do that. I don't know whether you was there, on that last night, they dance, stomp dance...Take to drinking. I don't kind of agree with that. People used to come around, like you, different officials here. People over there, that's all they doing...well in a way, I guess it's a celebration. I see that dance one night, at that Edmonds. I stayed there. Some people supposed to take me home. I stayed there all night. I sit in one place. I could get around then. They all come out and dance. They call it Morning Dance.

All of them pretty happy. I don't know, I don't think...
