

Yeah, she's still living.

(Is your brother still living?)

Yeah.

(Do you have other brothers and sisters?)

Yeah, some of 'em my cousins.

(When you were young, when you were a boy, how many people lived in the house with you?)

About four.

(Mother and father?)

Um-hum. (And grandma?) Yeah, and my uncle. (Was that your mother's mother?)

Um-hum, that's right.

MEXICAN BANDIT STORIES: FIRST STORY

(Why did the Kickapoos move down to Mexico?)(Interpreted by informant as why did he go to Mexico?)

Reason to go over there? (Yes.) Well, sometime ago I heard that my father's got killed in Mexico, Old Mexico. And I'm kinda mad when I hear he's got killed. I'm kinda mad. All I know is, I'm mad and went over there and tried to fight them Mexicans. That's what I go there for. So we got to Mexico and I stay with my other grandma and my father's mother. I stay with them and my uncles and my aunt. So we stay round there and pretty soon quite a few boys round there try to look for that Mexican. It's not just the people living, you know. There's some of 'em kinda bad man, you know, some killer or robber, or anything like that--them kind--not just people living, good kind. So, 'bout seven of us boys run around mountain, try to find them Mexican. Well, we find 'em about twice and fight, and we killed quite a bit. Stayed in mountain all the time. Maybe month. So way off this Indian reservation, it's outside, this Mexican land, staying around there. Well, we run around about three months like that, fighting Mexicans, that robber, you know. Pretty soon I heard some people talking about
