

them songs.

(Has he ever brought that out here?)

Yeah. We danced--just so happen they didn't catch it, or-- maybe somebody didn't have their tape recorders!

(How much does it cost to put on a pow-wow?)

They are expensive. But all Starhawks, everybody that dances, they made a little donation. We've been getting quite a bit of money. But they already have some in the treasury. But when they all get together and they have to cook a meal, everybody cooks and takes it over. So we're trying to make it easy on ourselves. Still, you know, instead of picking certain ones and telling them what to bring or what to do, we tell them to just bring what they can.

STARHAWK WOMEN'S AUXILLIARY ORGANIZATION

(Do you think you'll ever elect any women to be officers?)

No. Just men. Starhawks got a Women's Auxilliary. Josephine, my wife, is a member of that. She's not an officer--just a member. They take care of the cooking. At benefits they do all the cooking. Only one restriction a woman has, they have to dance behind the men. They can't dance with their men or they can't dance in front of the men--they have to dance in the back. But with Roberta, our granddaughter, we done a little bit different over here at Barefoot last week--we put her in the front. Yeah, but she was the head dancer. The rest of them stayed in the back. That's the only restriction we got on that. But the women folks got their own organization.

(Does this Women's Auxilliary ever have meetings?)

After a pow-wow or I mean after a Benefit Dance they get together and plan what they want to do. That's about the only time they get together.

(What about the women's costumes?)

They haven't decided on it yet. Same way with men--they haven't decided on their costumes. Several of them has got them squaw dresses, like Roberta's outfit. They look nice.

(Is Nelson Sage an officer?)

Yeah, he's the treasurer. And his wife is kind of the director
