

here and you take Eufaula, Muskogee, old towns. Eufaula is the oldest lodge, Masonic Lodge in Oklahoma. It's lodge No. I. And Muskogee was there before the Civil War. Muskogee and let me see another town, Muskogee and another town, Eufaula and then Old Fort Townsend, down in there. But, there's another town down there, I can't think what town it is, but there's old military towns, you know, they had a military they had a school there. It's in LaFore County. Florence, can you remember what--They had a school there, the first school. And I can't think of that Indians' name. They educated him and sent him to Washinton and he worked for the Choctaws up there in the legislature. But I can't think--territory days. And Norman

OU IN EARLY DAYS:

I was in Norman when jest had three buildings, over there at the school. And I think the amount of students, they had 75 or 80 students, somewhere along there, but I there was around 75 students.

(Do you remember when that was?)

Huh?

(What year was that?)

That was back in 1901, '02, '03 and '04. Along there. And they had the old still house there, where they butchered 'em. I call it a butcher-shop and get them (unintelligible) you know, and they butcher 'em dissect 'em hang 'em up and look like a meat market.

(Was it a medical callege?)

Huh?

(What was it?)

It was a--I don't know, it was a, it was some kind of medical college
