

Well, there's ruling, you know, when they play. That kind of game, you know, they got little, you know, something whenever they, you know whatever they want or mostly it's corn, you know. You know some kind of corn, you know, cornbread or anything, you know, they could make, you know. Sometime, they play that.

(How -- .)

There's a -- .

(Go ahead.)

Go ahead.

(I was just going to ask when -- the, did these partners, do they take turns throwing sticks?)

Yeah, it goes around.

(Oh, it goes around.)

Yeah, it goes around, you know. One hits, then, next, you know, they take turns, you know.

(Yeah. What about -- what about when a woman scores, does she play again or does it still go around?)

Yeah, yeah, she plays again as long as she, you know, score. You know, long as she just keeps going, you know.

(Yeah.)

Then, when the game's over, she still, you know, she still, you know, keep scoring, you know. She just keeps on until she miss, you know. It's got a miss in there. When one of them's wrong, it don't come out right. It's a miss, you know.

(Yeah, which -- which way does it go? Which way do they take turns, around like this or this way?)

Well, I don't know. Oh, it's just -- mostly, you know, it goes to the right.
