

Yeah, but yesterday I was talking with Bates. He said something about Wichita get it from the Sioux. See, they got different, you know, but another guy from Pawnee --

(Yeah.)

That's what -- that's well, that's where my uncle got it from, you know.

(Yeah.)

She went visit with her close friends, you know, Pawnee friends and took them to one of them. They're going to have war dance.

(Yeah, yeah.)

And the way he told me, he said, "I'm afraid of that dance." Well, I'm going to see what he say, you know. You know, he's afraid of it. He says it's a big ceremony. See, them day, you know, well, them Pawnees generally have a lot of chiefs.

(Yeah.)

Always several chiefs, you know, they set them down, you know. And they're going to have this war dance, you know. They said they didn't use a big drum. Yeah, them small one.

(Yeah.)

I don't know how many they had, but said they had a small drums. They don't hit faster like that.

(Yeah.)

Oh. He says, "The way I got it -- the way I got scared of it is some man -- they sang his song. The old man got up and danced." People say that song --

Oh, see where you going, you know. Well, he went -- made about second, he went to a big pot. I don't know what kind of pot. He could see that -- he could see it got lot of heat to it.

(Yeah.)
