

starve." So Sainday says, "Well, I know how. I will help you all. You all won't starve. But you all have to gather up all your wives. And they got to stand in a ring. And they got to hold a rope. And when I go in there--just nothing but them ladies," he said. And he said, "I got to dress up when I go in there. You mens can't come in there." So he start cleaning himself up. He put a lot of that clay on, you know. And he prettied himself up. Put on a blanket and went in there. He went in there, and there was a bucket in there, he said. He said, "You all see that bucket?" See, he was after them ladies in there. He wasn't really going to make medicine for them people there. He was going to see which one he's gonna catch, you know. So all them womans went in there. He said, "Well, when I sing, you all have to help me because that way, they will come. Them little bitty ones--what you call 'does.'" He said, "When they hear this song, they always come in. They will come around." So them ladies, he said, "As quick as one comes," he said, "You all have to catch it, and tie it by the legs. That's the only way we can get meat." So they close that tent. And he said, "When I sing, one of them ladies got to open that." So all them mens--they were outside just listening out to him. So he starts singing. He start singing about which woman he is going to catch in there. You know. It just so happen, I guess--he said it was one of them--his grandma--somebody--was in that bunch. I don't know--that's what he put it. I don't know if it's true or not! So he started singing. Just about that time, sure enough, one of those little does came in. So they caught that. So, he was still sizing those ladies up--which one he was going to catch--Sainday, for himself, you know. So he started singing again, and, boy, he was singing! And he told them ladies, "You all hit them tipi poles,
