

(Who is the one who was killed up in Colorado?)

That's my grandfather. My grandmother's father. Great grandfather.

(Did you remember what his name was?)

Last night I could think of his name. I layed here and I just thought of it and I finally found out, and this morning I couldn't even remember it. Right now I can't even remember. I think I know now. His name was Row Lodge. He was Arapaho. I got to found out. From one of those Arapahos I got to find out because I got a lot of folks up there. Around Watonga and Geary and I got some at Geary, and Watonga and Canton. And I have two cousins in Montana. They married into them Northern Arapaho.

(Your great grandfather, Row Lodge, was he the one who was killed fighting white people out there?)

Yeah, up there at Colorado.

(Was that a fight with a lot of Indians and a lot of white people?)

Yeah. A lot of Indians and a lot of whites.

(Do you know any more about it...exactly what happened?)

To who? My great grandfather.

(Yes.)

They...well, here quite awhile ago, he had a blanket what he wear it when they was having war, he had it on. And he had it on like that. They it was red and then after they kill him, this white man he took it.

He put it at this zoo up there at Denver...at Colorado. And he had it in the zoo for many years and his name was on there, and he was killed and that blanket was picked up by a white man and he put it in the zoo.

And not too long ago, that blanket was stolen from that zoo.

(In a zoo?)

From the zoo. And it was stolen from the zoo. Now its in Washington in a zoo somewhere.

(What would they have it in the zoo for?)
