

sister. The two of em. And all the others are dark. She's got three daughters and one son..that old lady. And he's (husband) And his daughter (referring to her husband's father's child) she's kind of light complexion. And ah, his son kinda light complexion, but his mother (referring to her husband's mother) and mother's sister..they're dark and their children are dark.

(Now did the Comanches capture your husband's grandmother?)

Yea. They captured her. Several of them..they captured, and they took em up you know. They take which one they take you know, so this man took this girl. She must be about fifteen years old when they captured her and they just let her play with them and he kept her for a wife..this old man kept her for a wife. And this young girl didn't know she was married to this man already. She didn't know and this girl always called him papa. And this old man always tell em not to call him that. Say that it was his wife. And this girl always get scared you know and just cry and I don't know how long she kept him. I guess til she got married. She said she bought her with the horses. A bunch of horses for this girl you know. Pretty..but she was pretty when she's old. I guess they went to Texas, you know, and they find them somewhere. This woman was a little girl you know. Said they was playing. There was several of them. Said they was playing somewhere outside of the house. There was a boy and two girls..three girls. Four of em out there playing and they had some of these dolls you know. They was playing with these dolls you know, and one of em dolls told this girl said, "Get down", that doll talked and told them said "Get down", and then these kids got scared of that doll and you know, I guess she told them to be still you know and not to make noise so they don't find them, and then she got
