

Well, I don't know, but he cleared his system, you know.

(Yeah.)

But the old lady says, you know, "After you take it, throw it out," you know.

(Yeah.)

You get--you get a (background noise)--oh, you get kind of (background noise) sick like, you know, you, you know, look like you are all in in the evening.

(Yeah.)

---

But she told him, "Well, when you get-that way, you get on the road, you know, work your legs out. You get all right." But he run from--pretty fast.

(Yeah. Do you--do you know what kind of medicine that was?)

Well, I see growing around in places, you know.

(Yeah.)

You know, it's--I wouldn't know how to use it.

(You know--you know what it looks like--what that plant looks like?)

Yeah, it's a--it's about that high, grows a little white flower. Oh, I haven't saw it for a long time. So, my grandma, she gave it to this boy in that, you know, when he went back school, you know, so he could run, you know. Well, he run it, well, last time I think he was supposed to go San Francisco, World's Fair, you know. See, he's going to run with them--them Hopi and Navajos.

(Yeah.)

They have--them people can run far, you know. I don't know how far they run, but he was going to go over there and run with them people. He was going to go with them. I think he took second.

(Yeah.)
