

(Yeah.)

He had a good size stick, you know. I didn't--I couldn't see, you know, that stick. When he hit it like that, I guess that stick was high.

(Yeah.)

Hit me right across here. (laughter) It didn't hurt me. It just glanced off.

(Yeah. How--how big are those sticks they use?)

Well, they use dogwood and this, I think they call it Chinaberry.

(Yeah.)

They--they--they look for stick. You know, you got to use--dig around, you know, pretty good size, you know. By the time, they season up, they get small. But it's just like a golf stick.

(Yeah.)

Something like that. You might even find a good one, you know.

(And how long are those sticks, Joe?)

Huh?

(How long are those sticks?)

Oh, about that long.

(What's that, about four feet?)

Oh, about four foot long. Oh, they have different kind. It's the kind you want. You want a short one, you know.

(Yeah.)

But they use them about that long.

(Yeah. How--how do they make those? You said that sometimes they have a curve on the end of those sticks?)

Oh, you took a plane like that.

(Yeah.)
