

(Yeah.)

But he didn't use--he use an arrow all right, but some of them, they call them blunts.

(Mmm-hmmm.)

He saw it. He ain't got no--it's not sharp. It's about that big.

(Yeah.)

Well, he use that kind. He hit that coin every time.

(Yeah.)

Arrow's hit that dollar (laughter), he hit that.

(Yeah.)

All day. When they was putting fifty cents and quarters and dimes, he was hitting them.

(Yeah.)

He hit them. Them people was giving to him.

(Yeah.)

I don't know how much money he made, (laughter) shooting with that arrow, you know.

(Yeah.)

Pretty good shot.

(Joe, when a piece--when you dry a piece of dogwood, sometimes it gets kind of bent, you know?)

Yeah.

(How did they straightened those out to make---).

Well, the way the old people do, you know, when, they cut them green.

(Yeah.)

They cut them green, and kind of shape them a little. Then, they tie them clear across. They have bunch about that big they tie it with, right here,
