

They cut bit one about that big, you know. When it seasoned up, you know--sometimes, they use a (not clear) big hunch called post.

(Mmm-hmm.)

They get it out of there some way, you know. My uncle over here, he got machine, you know.

(Mmm-hmm.)

I don't know whether he make, but he said he can--he used to cut, you know, bow out for my uncle, you know.

(Yeah.)

He just put that post on there. (laughter)

(Is that the old Wichita way?)

No! (laughter) Yeah, that man's a Kitchi (Wichita word), you know. He'd be a carpenter, you know.

(Yeah.)

He--he said, "That's where--same way with arrows." I guess he got a machine. You know, he stick a thick stick about that big. Just put it in there. It comes out round, you know.

(Yeah.)

And I don't know whether he makes them all the time, but he says, "I can do that."

(Yeah.)

Well, the---

(About how--how long were the bows?)

What?

(How long were the bows that they used in that game?)

Oh, like I say, different size, you know.

(Yeah, I mean, how about the one they use for game---?)
