

Well, my daddy, he probably make them about that long, you know, not too long; but some of them, you know, they have them long.

(Yeah.)

But in Buffalo hunt, you know, they use them little bitty ones, you know.

(Yeah. Did they--when they made a bow, Joe, did they--did they ever wrap anything around? Did they wrap sinew around the bow or was it just plain wood?)

Just plain wood. See, it's a handle sometimes. Well, just say, you know, when they just make a--fixing it for a boy, you know, well, they always have a kind of handle on there, you know. They carve this one or this way. That's the way, you know, they fix them (not clear).

(Yeah.)

But mostly, you know, they have, you know, just straight. See, the one he made me, he just--I don't know. That wood must have been that big. You know, I'm just saying that, but he cut it down, you know, where he split it. You know, with the bow he made---

(Yeah.)

---he just split the--that, let the wood, you know.

(Yeah.)

'Cause I could tell, you know, each side of the Bois'darc, you know.

(Yeah.)

But he--he fixed it, you know.

(Yeah.)

He was use to it, you know.

(Yeah.)

Well, there's different ways, you know, fixing it, bows, you know. Some have different ways of fixing bows, you know.
