

me one bottle of vitamins. And see in the mornings, well you take these six kids, I give them vitamins, see it don't last ten days, two weeks. I asked him, I said, I talked to the nurse Miss Enlow I said, "Can you give me four bottles?" He spoke up he said, "What do you want? Who you want them vitamins for?" I said, "Well I got six grandkids, and I want vitamins for all six. I just want four bottles." He said, "You don't need all four of them. Just give her one." And I said, "No if you're that hard up on your vitamins, you must keep your vitamins. I can go to the drug store and buy my vitamins for the kids. You just working here. All this medicine here don't belong to you. It belongs to us Indians. So you just keep them. I don't want them. Hereafter I'll take the kids to Dr. Rupe." He don't like Dr. Rupe. He said, "No, no you can come back and get some more." I said, "No, I don't like to come to clinic. You just have to sit and sit and wait and wait. If there's a real sick patient in here, you just go according to how they register. We ought to get a different doctor in here and you go where you came from." He said, "No Mrs. Medicine Elk, you don't do me right." And I said, "No, you're the one that don't do me right. You're the one that don't want... I don't want them vitamins." He had this little's... Jenny's mae's... she wasn't in school then, she kept coughing that evening and I took her down there. I thought maybe he could give her a penicillin shot. He gave her a small bottle of cough syrup and said, "That'll check it." I said, "Why can't you give her penicillin." And he said, "No she don't need no penicillin. She might be alleergic to penicillin, and you come back in here and blame me." I said, "No, shes' had penicillin shots before. Keep your vitamins." I got that
