

(Did you gain a lot of weight?)

Yes.

(Were you happy when you found out you were going to have a baby?)

Yes. For awhile I wasn't.

(Did you want a boy or a girl?)

It didn't make no difference.

(Did your husband want a boy or girl?)

It didn't make no difference to him. So I have had...like I told that doctor last fall... he asked me all kinds of questions around that way, you know, I said, "I have had 10 children and one miscarriage." and he said, "You have had 11 pregnancies." And I said, "Yes sir." Seven boys and three girls and one miscarriage.

(That's a lot of kids.)

Yeah. I guess I must have let my husband....((?))

((Uncontrollable peals of laughter, leaping around the room and snorts of delight caused by whatever she said: Transcriber's note.))

(Did your mother-in-law or anybody tell you if there was anyway of telling if it would be a boy or a girl?)

Uh-huh. Well, it's the shape of your stomach. If it's kind of round it's a girl and if it's kind of short, you know, some of them are like that, it's a boy.

(Does it make a difference how high you carry them or how low?)

Uh-huh.

(And that's the only way they can tell?)

Uh-huh.

(Did they predict your first one right?)

Yeah.
