

(I thought your first one was a boy.)

Huh-uh. It's a girl. She was here last week. We took her home a week ago Sunday, a week ago yesterday, and she is coming back this week-end. Her dad it going to go get her.

(Where does she live?)

El Reno.

(And are they all married to Indians?)

No. My kids not married to no Indians.

(They aren't? All married to white people?)

Uh-huh. Except Bill. His first wife was an Indian. They didn't get along so they got a divorce and he tried another time, second time. It's worked out so far. He's got a red-headed one now, she's good one. ((Unclear)) She's really good to me. When she come I don't have much to do around here. When she comes she does most of the cooking and baking and...

(Did you mind if they married white people?)

No. Huh-uh. As long as they got along with them it was all right with me.

(How many of your grandkids are married?)

Two - three. Glenda and whats you call it - I thought they might get married but they didn't.

(Who's that?)

Bob. I think he gave diamond ((?)) ring before he left.

(You have a lot of people?)

Oh, you ought to be here when we get together. We might have at Fourth of July. I say now you tell your mother.

(You all gonna meet down here?)

I think so. Jimmy's gonna be here next week-end. Now they in Nebraska. They went up there for that (not clear) Reunion, you know, way back there.
