

here to care for, he says.

(Who was this man that was talking to, you?)

That law.

(Is he the one that came to the house in Carnegie?)

I don't know which law.

(But it was a law?)

Yea, it was a law.

(What did they do about Key?)

Well, they kept him and jailed for long time and finally we had a big court at Paul's Valley. But his uncle, everybody got lots of money and I don't know..they might have paid the jury and everybody else. There was ten juries you know, when we having court, there just one man against him and the rest of them they all with him. Course we just had the attorney, but I think he must bought that attorney, because he's just in the opposite. In..to begin with, she just treat us like a baby, but toward last she kind of quit us. That attorney..his secretary, I guess. Well, that's the way it went. And finally they beat us. But on and on and he just afraid. We won't let him see that baby. On and on and finally was at Bawton. And he got me so mad. He got me so mad I told Key you better not give no drink to my young children, my young boys. They not old enough. Make me mad. I went up there, I told Key I said, alright Mr. Key, you could die like you killed my daughter. No, I didn't kill her, he said. Yea you could die same way and sure enough he die. Had a car wreck, got killed. His own fault. You asked for it.

(What was that daughter's name?)

Thelma Hummingbird. She's Eugene's sister. Yea, you seen Eugene.
