

(Do a lot of the Indians go to the clinic doctor though?)

Well, yes, we go to the clinic Monday and Friday, but in between times he doesn't take nobody.

(He's not a very good doctor. Do they like him?)

Well, I'll tell you this other doctor before him was a very good doctor. You could go to him whenever there was an emergency. Just bring you to the clinic and look at you and give you some medicines, but they say this guy don't. I don't know him very good. I don't know. There's been a lot of complaints against the doctor. Dr. Abalordie. I don't like him. Well, I hate to say that, I'm not too well acquainted with him.

(What are some of the complaints against him?)

Well, oh, I hear a lot of different people say things that he has told them. Like, for instance, this Little Man-- Little Man, he use to go quite often, every clinic day and I guess he told him off. Said, "You are always here every clinic day." Well, sometimes sometimes I get anemic, my arms--my blood drops low sometimes and don't go to him very often. When I use to go to him when I was sick with it, every time I go over, this nurse would tell me--the head nurse there--she would tell me to come back and let me check on my blood every two weeks, every time I go in there, said, "Now what's your trouble?" They know why I'm there.

(Do a lot of the Indians like him?)

Huh huh.

(Do they go to the clinic anyway?)

Oh, they go anyway. I don't know too much about him. I haven't been around him much.
