

where you killed that buffalo, and use that water to boil eggs and them glands all night long, keep changing water til daylight. So he done it. How come that mess didn't burn up? It was that water. The next morning those glands became shells to fit that gun. Well, that's how come your gonna get even with him. Just one shot is gonna do the job. So he goes up north, when all at once, late in the evenin' there's a party up there and some of them see him. Well, two of them go to investigate. Them Sioux men ask him, "Who are you?" "I'm an Arapahoe." "What are you doing?" "I'm looking for a certain party. Where can I find him?" "Well, he's camped right in the middle facing east. This evenin' he's sitting right out in front of his tipi, smoking a pipe with his chiefs, he's gonna sit in the middle. He's the man your looking for, he's got a bunch a feathers, different kinds of bird feathers on his hair. He's the man your looking for." "That's all I want to know." He gets on his horse and headed right for that mine. Soon looks up, says, "Whoa whoa, just pull that trigger." Shot him right in there. Went right through him. Well, they dig all night couldn't find nothing, nothing but a great hole. You know why they couldn't find nothing, it was lightning, electrically. He said, "All right, go get my black horse. If this horse goes up that ? I won't kill you. He tried to make that horse go up there but he just balked, tried 4 times, but he couldn't make it go up. He said, "Well, go get my white horse, If that white horse goes across that river, I'll be all right." He gets on that horse, tries to make that horse go across that river but he just balks. So he goes back, says, "Well I'm done for I know why this man got it, why he killed him for. This man that gave me the power to do them things, he's the one that gave him this, what to use on me. If you find that bullet, but they
