

"No not yet." And all at once, one of these dogs come out. And when it come out, you know how the little dogs cry, it just cried like that and he said, "What's the matter? I thought I heard a dog cry. I thought I heard a dog crying." And he just dove in the tent, put that door this way and dove in the tent. There she was laying down and she had them puppies. She had four little puppies. And that man said, "So! All the time you was doing that with this dog we got. Nowonder that dog just follow you everywhere you go and you would just pet that dog, and everywhere you sit down, that dog's right by you." That's what he told them. And he pick up that dog, one of them little dogs, and he throw it at his wife, and it hit her right in the face, and he said, "So you keep these dogs, if you love that dog so much, better than I you do. You stay with that dog." And he went out, he went out and he walked to that tent, and he brought him back arrows, and he opened that tent like that and he killed all them little puppies, all them four little puppies, and her mother didn't know what to say, and her grandmother just sit there and watched. And he got that bow and arrow, and said, "Now, this is what you're going to get." He went like that and shot this girl right through her heart, and she fall over dead. And he told her mother, "Now you go and bury your daughter and these dogs, what she liked so much. Now it's her husband I'm going to kill." And he went over to the tent and this dog was laying there and when that man came in he just growled at that man. He wasn't glad to see that man and he just growled at that man. He got a stick and knock it in the head and kill it and drug it over there where he killed that woman and throwed that dog on her and hollered, "All you folks come and see what happened." And all those
