

did.

(Your grandmother taught you how to play games?)

Yes.

(Do you remember any of those?)

You could go down to the creek when it's pretty like this in the summer time and we just set around on the bank of...it was really nice down there at the spring set. I be, oh, I be pretty good size and she learn me how to play rocks and throw rocks in the creek and water and she would tell me to sit in the water and wash my face. Lay in the water and swim around. That water was that deep in places. I would in there and walk around. After awhile I would get tired. She would take me and put my clothes on and take me back to the house. Tell me to lay down and sleep.

(Were you in school at that time?)

No. I was too small yet. And then after I wake up...she have pound meat you know...balls. She would open her...she had a bag with this meat in a rawhide and she had all these meat balls in there...great big ones like that...she have it filled up with that meatballs and she would take it out and give me one and tell me to sit down and eat it. That was my dinner or supper. I eat that. Then she have lots of dried meat what she cut and wrap up like that in great big outfit. Then she give me that dried meat. She always have a lot of dried meat. When she run out of that meat my father would butcher a cow. He had a bunch of cattle and he would go kill a cow and they would dry it. They would cut it up and dry it and put it up there and that was our meat. We would
