

he stopped growling and just set there and watch her and she was so tired, she went off to sleep. She stayed there all the next day and they had some deer meat and they had just piled up there...I guess that's what he killed and take it up there to his big old cave and they just save it to eat. Finally she saw that meat and she had a knife...she had a knife on her belt, a great big long knife and she took it out and cut that meat and she build a fire and she cooked some of that meat and she ate it. All through that cold weather she stayed there. One night this bear, he come over there and layed with her and just hug her like this and just grab her tight like this and shake her and throw her down and do this to her and finally after this the bear done something to her, and this other bear she got mad and she just tore herself open like that and lay on her back and growl and scream and she was jealous of that woman. And that big bear would just grab her and throw her over there and she would catch this woman. And this woman was really scared but she got used to this big bear. Then he would go out hunting and catch her by the arm and lead her out and stand outside and this woman would run at her. They go out hunting and he kill something and he would lay it over his back and she would get in behind and they would go back to the cave and that was their meat. Whatever he killed, deer or buffalo or anything like that, and then he live with her a long time and finally she got pregnant by this bear and then she got big and it was kind of getting warm out and one night she had pain in her stomach and she had three little bears. She was carrying three little bears. So she had three little bears, she didn't know what to do but she just took care of those three little bears and she would nurse them and finally
