

you're going to be as good as she is--if she's that kind of woman. If that man is a loving man--if he loves everybody and gives advice to other people, you're going to be that good. See, you imitate those. That's why you got to be very careful who you elect to keep them.

(When did James Medicine Elk take them from Oklahoma?)

He lives at Canton. He lives here. He just came to Oklahoma to get married. He come from that ceremonial country in Montana. They're great believers. They own what they call a Hat-Tent--Tipi. Hat Tipi. I guess you've heard of the (sacred) Hat. And see, they're the owners of that. And I think another one is called--oh it's the same one--it's called the Buffalo Hat Tipi. That's what they have.

And they have other religions too, I guess. And they're great people in believing that way. And that's why this man accepted them.

(Do you think he would ever move back to Montana?)

No. His wife's from here, and his father-in-law is living here. I don't think he'll ever leave.

HOW ARROW KEEPER SELECTED AND PRESENT DAY CHIEFSHIP

(If he should die, what would happen to the Arrows?)

Well, they'd elect another man.

(From here in Oklahoma?)

Nobody knows.

(Who are the people that would be responsible for electing another man?)

The Bowstring Clan, and the chiefs and the headmen. They'd get all together and talk it over.

(Are there any chiefs and headmen today?)

Yes. But not like the real chiefs we used to have back there. They
