

quite a while. We growed up right there.

(At what place?)

This next eighty over west of here. We growed up there.

(Was that your father's place?)

Uh-huh, my father's place. But he willed it to my brother.

(How old was--I was wondering if you knew when your father was born?)

I don't know his birthday or I don't know how old he was. I couldn't tell you. He's been dead for quite a while, so I don't know.

(Well, how many brothers and sisters did you have?)

Well, I had two brothers. They're dead. And I got one brother living. And I got one sister living and I got three of 'em dead. One of them ain't been dead very long. My sister.

(Were they older than you?)

Yeah; they were. I'm the youngest of all my sisters. My my brother's younger than me. And I'm the youngest. And Mattie over here, she's the next. So we're the only ones that's left now.

(What was your father's name?)

(Pronounces the name 'anesinēni)

(Did he have an English name too?)

Well, they use to call him Jud.

(Judge? Why did they call him that?)

I don't know why they call him that for. That's what the white people called him. But that's his real Indian name, 'anesinēni

(What about your mother, what was her name?)

KisÉ kwā eah My mother lived over 100 years old.

(She did? I bet she had some interestimes didn't she?)

Oh yeah.
