

deers then but they just rabbits and squirrels and quails and fish.

(Well, did they use the gun?)

Yeah. They use gun. They didn't have no bow and arrows then after that.

They had guns. But the boys they use to take guns--I mean dogs. They just took their dogs to catch the rabbits and skin them up and hang them over the fire over-night. They're sure good like that. And that's the way we used to fix them.

(Did you have much rabbit meat to eat?)

Oh, they used to be lots of rabbits. We have lots of rabbit meat and squirrels. But now you can't hardly get that.

(What about birds?)

No. We don't get birds. They never have got any quails either.

(Or ducks or anything?)

Oh, yeah, they get lots of ducks and geese. Wild geese. When they go south, that's when they're good, but when they go south they're not any good.

(You mean when they go north?)

Uh hah, when they go north. But, when they come from the north, that's when they're good. They have a bad tastin'.

(Some irrelevant conversation.)

CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

(Well, where there any--or missionaries or churches around when you were little?)

That's only one over here. That's where they finish makin' quilts over there now. Sewing quilts. They help the Indians do things now. I guess that's where my sister's been now. To piece a quilt. And after they get them pieced they tack' them like that. They take turns.

(Well, did you go over to that church when you were a little girl?)

Oh, that's where I first went to. I went there all the time. Till my children got big and they joined the Baptist so I joined the Baptist too.
