

we saw them. They were gamblin', you know. And so, we walked back down the hill, and started up the road. And we got a little ways up this road and there stickin' out of the weeds at the side of the road, was a leg of a man. Well, we stopped at the first house. Well, 'bout , we walked on and we put near got to the top of this hill, and by the time we got up, here come ~~the~~ this coupe, just passed us, you know, a car, and there was two boys in it. We got a pretty good look at 'em 'cause, you know, goin' up this hill. And you know, cars didn't go so fast then. And so we stopped at this first house we came to. And we told this man, and you know, he was a little jibberish, about it. We were just kids, and so, - but he did agree to go back down there. But he wouldn't let us go. And anyway, it was a man. And it turned out these two boys in this coupe, had gotten a ride with this man, and had killed him, and pitched him out there. And they went back down the hill for some reason or 'nother, and for another reason had come on back up, I don't know why. But anyway, they caught 'em, 'bout two/ or three days later. But you know, if it hadn't been for the man in the house, being willing to go down and see - - Our parents, they wouldn't have ever believed us kids, that we saw that. But we saw lots of things happen when we was little, over there in Drumright, you know. , A guy beat up his wife, men fightin', lots of men fightin'. Boy they just had terrible street fights. My brother, right in the big thick of it. 'course he was kid. 'ee. They had a gang over there, they called the "Dirty Dozen", and they would do mischief, like the gang kids do now. They'd rob and steal, and beat people up, everything. And one time my brothers were out, and with two more boys, Merchant Boys. And Merchant boys, their father was a school teacher and also a preacher, so he had to be very strict on 'emmm you know, and they had to be home. But my brothers, they worked all the time, and they was pretty much on their own. Anyway, they come up on
