

(Now you can start again and tell that story.)

Yeah. She call that bedding there celi'iyē.h. And that cover is 'isi'oh 'isi'oh is that cover. That's what she means. You know, it's that cover--she call it 'isi'oh. And what she told--you know they were pretty soft--just like this. She gets it soft. She--how you call that thing--that's bent?

(Scraper?)

Yeah. 'ina.8 o/ Yeah. That's the one she used, she said, when she's making her bedding. She got brains, liver, and little grease in there, she said. And she go ahead and just smear it all over where she was fixing it. When she had it up for sun, I guess, when it soak,--got in there and washed it. Then she go ahead and got a bone and she fixed it. She scraped it. Got it soft. And she's got bedding made. And she call it celi'iyē.h. And same way she got cover how she fixed it--it's 'isi'oh what they were.

(What kind of an animal?)

Buffalo. Buffalo hide.

(Did she leave the hair on it?)

Yeah. They leave the fur on the outside but the inside where it's like this, now, she gets it--she tan it good. And then they use it. It's just soft like this. Cause I know, she still had that cover yet. It's pretty good size yet. I seen it. I always tell her that it was ugly thing to use. She said, "You won't think way when you grow up." "That thing was best thing to use," she said. "It's warm--warmer than these blankets," she said. That's what she told me. 'icidi.ci --that's what she told me.

(What does that mean?)

"Your blanket's no good," she said, in Apache. 'icidi.ci. si.'a/ --

"Your blanket's no good--it's cold," she said. And that blanket, that hide she meant, she said, it kept her warm. She just used that all winter long,
