

around there for window like that. Had to fix it where it would be open there and he could take that and close it, you know, and put that outfit on there and it would close in the night, it closes. And they had about four lanterns and I don't know what, where he got those from, what place they come from, he had four lanterns that they burned in that house, and then they also, he made when they kill a beef they get that tallow, that fat, and that fat that's in there, they take that and work it some way and they make it such like some candle. They make a candle out of it and then they put a hide, just kind of a hide about two inches wide and about an inch thick, they put that in that fat around there and they work it around till it become like a candle. So he didn't have those lanterns at that time, so he went and got this and they use it. They burn that for light. That fat, you know. He made it and made it round and they work it someway were a nd when the light it give light. And he made three or four of them kind to give plenty of light in the house. So he goes from here down there on horseback from here to Anadarko to his work everyday and then he comes home about dark. He goes there everyday, he work there. Oh, he work there for many years and then whenever month all the tribes, the three tribes, they all come down to Anadarko to get their rations. Once every month they go and they get in there and he goes over there and they got the names of those people, how many in the family. If there's a big family they get one whole beef, one whole cow and they give them blankets and they give them tools and they give them shovels, axe, rakes, and these scythes they got grass with. And they have long bladed knives that they can use those long blades cut heads off of caffre corn and they cut cane and whatever they cut well, they can use those long bland knife. They use it. So they give all those blankets, they give food, out. If it's a big family they give them a big sack of flour, they give them everything. Bacon, flour, sugar, caffee, beans, whatever they--the rations that they have.