

thing like that among your Indian people. Today, I feel great and real happy in my heart for what news you brought to me. And that's going to make me happy and going to make my school happy. We'll be there, on time. We'll be there." So we went on into town, and they only had about three stores there in that town at that time, just three stores.

(Is that Anadarko?)

Anadarko. There's was Boke's and Charley Cleveland, they call it, way edge of town there. Two stores. So my--and Camp there was three stores, Camp. Old man Camp, and that's where my grandfather trades in there. He trades. So we stopped behind the store and I got off and they all got off, we all went in the store. My grandmother they went to, my mother and my grandmother they start buying the stuff. Food, oh, I don't know, we had a wagon load going back. Wagon load of stuff, we had everything. Fruit cakes, you know, cookies, and candy and fruit candy. Different kind of fruit they had stuff. Grandfather and grandmother bought it. And my mother then, she bought some stuff. And going back we couldn't hardly ride in that wagon it was so full we couldn't load everything so we got back home that home and they took all the stuff and everything, they had mans there and all my uncles and all of them they were all camped there, and another Indians come there and they camp there. And they all took hand to help grandfather. So all them womens that were there were preparing tables and they make twelve tables about 20 feet long. These white men came down and made tables. Just made them so they would be stout, they won't break when the people start eating. Fixed them solid. There was a lumber yard started there at Stecker then. So they bought the lumber down to make the tables. They brought it over there and made about twelve or fourteen tables about twenty foot long. And so they was big shade trees there, just shade threes there all around there, and they put them tables under that shade. Kept putting them in there. Getting them ready and benches. So the first day they got everything complete. My grandfather, and my grandmother, and my mother, they went back to town to get more stuff. They
