

(Well, did you ever get down around Ft. Sill?)

Yeah, I been down there and I around Apache County cattle down there around Missouries, around Lawton and out west around Indianahoma. I traveled lots of part of the country. I use to be preaty big dealer until I got kinda knocked out.

(Well, you were down around there when Geronimo was down there weren't you?)

Well, I've heard that Gerinomo was wround. And I know a lot of old people. And I passed by when I was down through that Missouri and they tell you that old Geronimo showed me the house. See, I use to do that and there use to be kinda of a summer resort down there in Cratersville, and we use to go down there (unin.) and around that Cratersvile and we use to go down that house. He was right there on the hill from us.

(What was the name of that place?)

Cratersville.

(Cratersville?)

Cratersville Park. Use to be down there, use to have a big rodéo down there about the 1Fourth of July and old Frank Rush, old man Frank he was a turkey inspector in the early days of that reserve. He was a kind man, but he caught on to the rodeo and boy they had some cattle there. I sure rough them big ole long horns. I seen him have them in the cart, with this and he stand up and he tell them wild stories to that thing about that, and they wuldn't go--course he had them framed. And that reserve I've went in there and a lot of people in there in that reserve use to rent (ujin.) the cow we don't deal with - but they use to give you credit if you had land up close there to put 50 or whatever you might put in, but you have to pay for that reserve. I use to buy a lot of cattle and I use to go down in there and there's open country. Now me and you couldn't have got off in there and never got back. But them old folks got use to it, I use to go down there and they'd say, well Dee, you just as well leave your horses, or break your neck in these rocks. They wasn't use to it. But you got up there where them
