

Mrs. E.: I went out to his house to review him and he was not at home and he came in the office on the 27th and he told me his land had come up for sale and they had offered him $6400 and he didn't accept it, he thought it was worth twice that much.

Mr. T.: And that's the first you knew of it?

Mrs. E.: Yes.

Mr. T.: I see. Is that in your records?

Mrs. E.: No.

Referee: Is it recorded in the narrative, which is a part of the record, that interview with him?

Mrs. E.: Just the information I got for the review and what I filled out on this form, all. Oh yes, I remember I did. I didn't put the price down on this either, do you want to hear this narrative entry?

Mr. T.: This is the entry you made on the date Mr. O'Field came to see you and to tell he had refused a bid that had been made?

Mrs. E.: He didn't come for that purpose. But in the discussion, he told me that.

Mr. T.: Was the purpose of his visit connected with this matter of his land?

Mrs. E.: No. Every 6 months we review our clients that are receiving for their children AFDC, and it was his regular review time and he came into the office on that so the information could be gotten from him concerning his condition, his property, his resources, his income, children, etc.

Mr. T.: (not clear) stated his renewal or what ever you call it, included what had to do with his land?

Mrs. E.: That's what he brought up.

Mrs. T.: That's what he came to see you about?

Mrs. E.: No, that isn't what he came to see me for necessarily, it was his regular review whether it came up or not, he would have been seen that month.

Referee: Was it necessary in the process of making this review to discuss this matter with Mr. O'Field, whether he brought it up or not?

Mrs. E.: Yes.

Referee: Whether or not he had brought it up himself?

Mrs. E.: We discuss all resources, any income, and all property that a client has. And since it had come up for sale and it was on the list then he told me he hadn't accepted the offer.

Mr. T.: Well, had you anticipated that or not?

Mrs. E.: You anticipate anything when you start to review a client.
