

So, he advised me and my family - - if you people don't listen to me, don't do what I'm telling you, - I'm telling you the truth, and if you don't go, there's going to be a terrible sickness. There's going to be a lot of you people going to die out." And that's what the old man told them. He said, "The message came last night to me. It came to me and he said, "The message told me that me and my whole family, if you don't go, me and my whole family is going. We going to go and you people won't know where we're going to go. We're going to go to a place where he said for me to go. So, that's where I'm taking my whole family." So, when he got ready, all his family, and they won't listen to him - - say, "Ah, that's nothing. He just talking. He don't know nothing about anything." So, don't listen to him. Don't listen to him, you people, no. There ain't going to be no terrible sickness come around here." And this and that. And so, they all never did - - they didn't want to. That night came and when everybody was asleep, this old man and his whole family, relatives and all family, they got together and they got their belongings, their tapees and teepee poles and everything. Then they start going down toward the water, that big blue water over there. It's a big, wide, and long water. I don't know how many feet, how deep that water is. Nobody knows. They can't reach bottom. They tried and they couldn't do it. So, there was several springs coming out of that river. So, they at the lake and this old man and his belongings, they went on. They went on that night and they went in that water. They went in that water and about a few days after that then that sickness came and it just killing those Indians. Those Kiowas and Kiowa-Apaches, just killing them. They getting sick, and they just like a big war, it just cleaned them out. So, them Indians, they had to get up. They had to move away from where they were at. They went to a different place.
