don't burn, it won't burn. Well, they put that on their fire, you know.
They put the dough on top of that, and they start cooking it, just the dough and the water, that's the way they make that. Make bread out of it, so they turn it around until it cooks. Then after it's cooked, they use it for bread.
That's what they know fer bread. They don't know what flour, they don't know what baking, they don't know what anything like we eating today. They didn't know what it was. Never did know. So, they brought that in there at the last.
They brought that in there and when they got through eating, then all the woman folks in that camp they begin to bring their food. One place they bring it. And then those people would sit around there - - that big arbor, that celebration arbor they put, they all get around out there, way out there just so far. When they all get over then then they start giving food out. They give food out. See, the relatives of these four mens that's in there, the relatives of them, they furnish everything, everything. They have to furnish everything to feed all of them, all the rest of them that were there. Well, they go around and feed them. They feed them till everyone of them get plenty.
And then after they get through, about that time again, well, they take some more food in there to them. They don't take very much food because they don't have anything in there stomach for four days, you know. So they give them water and they give them some food again. And after that's over, well, that's the end of that Sun Dance. They call it the Sun Dance. So, they got through.
When they got through, one of the chiefs, he said,"Well, last night something tell me that we got to move. We got to move and go to another place, and it's so many days journey. Going out to the place." So he told them. That next morning bright and early, they all got their belongings, the whold tribe, they got everything and stat moving. And where that man told them where it was at, they got there. When they got over there, well, they camped over there, and
