

one agreed to it. That he wanted to go to school. He wanted to go to Carlisle. That's Carlisle Indian Institute. Big school. So my father went to that school and there's several Kiowas went there and several more Apaches and Comanches went there. Several more other tribes went to Carlisle. So my daddy went on over there and he got graduate over there. Got his education and all his schooling. About that time, just about that time, then they, after they come back, they had this Kiowa school. This Kiowa school already building up, here on the northwest corner of Anadarko. The Indians, they call it Kiowa school. So they a great big story building and it hold about five or six or seven hundred students--children. That's where, when he come back from Carlisle, he went and he was a (?), you know he took care of the boys in that school. (He took care of them. And took them there and took care of them. And got to be, I think, some kind of a teacher there. My father, after that, he got to be some kind of teacher. And he was pretty well known. He was smart and well educated Kiowa-Apache. He was pretty well educated. So after he went to school there and work over there for the school and here after he got that work, so he went and married my mother. My mother there. So, that following about three or two--after that he was still working with the school, he got married to my mother. And after he got married, he quit the school and moved down here. With my grandfather down here. My father married my mother. My mother beared my brother. There just two of us. My father beared me and my brother is older than I am. They went and had me and him. Just two of us. That's my father. So, when I was about one year old, my father died. When I was one year old my father died. I didn't even see my father. But my older brother seen him. He knows him. But my brother is dead too, he's dead many years. I was the only one from Tartsahs living today. And I am sixty years old. And I am living today from my father.

(Who is this Jim Tartsah?)
