

or feet swell, I just mark it--get it wet--and mark it around here and that swelling won't go up over this. (She draws a line around the leg above the area of swelling.) That's how come I got that. Put it here. (Do they use that charcoal for any other kind of doctoring?)

Oh, you just--after they take the drum off, the charcoal you know is in the bottom of that drum, some of them get it and go like this (rub palms) and just dab it on their face like that--on their head because it's been blessed and they want to live long time. That's the way it was blessed. I'll show you this crazy thing. Ha, Ha. It's going to make you go crazy. I'm just saying that. See this, that's just glass. Beer glass. And you know what I use this for--just like your knee hurts right there or anywhere--just get it and just cut it like that, all over like that, mark it around with that coal like this and then cut the inside were you mark it and just cut it like this all over, and when it start bleeding--I ain't got no horn, just set that horn on there and (she makes sucking sound) go like that. Pretty soon that horns going to fill up and take all that black, bad blood out of you. That's what this is for. Ha, ha. Make you get scared, isn't it. Go crazy.

(I saw a Kiowa woman do that one time.)

Woman, work with it. Like that. Yeah. This is what we use, you know,--this is crow feathers. You just get a bunch of these and put them together like this and tie them on your porch or at your door, anywhere, and they going to hang there long time and nothing, no ghosts, what we talk about won't come to the house. They scared of this feathers.

(How come?)

I don't know. That's the way they told us. Let's see what this? Oh,
