

Yeah. Uh-huh. That's a funny old name. Some of the names that I can't, I can't word it or either I can't say it. They're hard to pronounce some of the old name. Just like my mother's name, they call her Libby all the time. But her real old name is uh- (Comanche name). Boy, you don't know how hard it is to say. ((Laughter)) See if you could spell it. ((Pronounces Comanche name again.))

(C-e-s-a-m-a-k, ((pronounces Comanche name)).

Uh-huh.

(b-i-a)

((Unclear)) w-o-double o-k-q-u-e

(I knew it ((unclear)). ((Laughter))

((Laughter))

(You all know ((unclear)).)

((Laughter))

(How did they give names, I mean, you know, how did these names come out? How did the person get them?)

Well, some of them when they want to give a name. They give it by what they done, you know. What kind of, say like uh- for instance, he done something in uh fighting way or if he's a warrior or anything like that, he done some great, well he's going to name him that, give him that name. So that way, why, he live to old age. Just, just...

(More like a child?)

Yeah, when they child. Yeah. Like Kiowas the same way they have. (Unclear). Yeah, just like that and uh Kiowas and Comanches just about the same thing.

(In other words, if I gave, if I had a name, I would give my name to - like a child, a baby.)

Yes.
