

I guess she did. They left here, and I guess their all dead though.
Cause I know he's daad.

(And Josephine Loman?)

Jane Loman.

(Jane Loman?)

(Pop: I don't know.

(Maybe he didn't adopt Jane if she didn't go by the name Cobb.)

(pop: I don't no whether Sophie did or not.

(Sophia Cobb--)

(Pop: He had them both his own.

Yeah, I don't know whether that was his daughter or not. Might have been his brothers child. He said he raised them. He told my grandfather that.

(Pop: Yeah, he raised them.)

(Well, Pop came back to Hugo for Preacher Cobb's funeral.)

Well--

(And that had to be after I was born,)

(Pop) Oh, yeah.)

(Because I remember being at his house in Hugo, which that would have been 1926, '27, '28 or sometime cause I was a little kid. And then my aunts had a trunk of old clothes in the barn out there. And my sister and I would go out there and we'd put on those long dresses.
Them button shoes, you know, high top shoes. And big hats, we got up there and we dressed up, you know, in all that old stuff. And there was a box of dried apples or something up there. Anyway, we ate a lot of those dried apples and drank water, and swelled up until I think the family thought we were going to blow up. But we really had
