

repeating those stories. And they have 'em in book form. He sent me, before he died, he sent me a copy of that book. And I loaned it to somebody and that's the last I've known of it. I have thought lots of times that when I would go over to Paris I would go in there, and if necessary, I would buy one. It was a book about - Oh, it was of historical value. Here - there's a directory of Hugo that I published in 1925, I think. Look at it, what does it say on there?

(1930. Hickman's Hugo City Directory, 1930.)

End of Side II

About 15 minutes left on tape