

Or you could go this way. Round to (not clear) and right straight out way up there. And just keep going until you come to those mountains up there and turn south. And by that hillside, mountainside, there's lot of it in there. The ones that's got red berries. But right now--day before yesterday, there was some people came over to our tent up there at the dance they wanted some cedar, and I left what I had you know and I didn't take--just a little bunch of it. And then they wanted some. I said "I know where you all--it's little ways from here now. Since you're all here now why don't you run up here and get it?" And we supposed to go with them and they told George to fill them sacks up you know. They meet--him and other family they sack it up you know. Had those four--they meet and divide it so they could dish it out. Well, they went over there themselves and just little while after they got over there this white man came over there. He said, "Oh, I'm sure sorry to have to tell you to look out for snakes." He said, "I killed 24 rattlesnakes right in here yesterday."

(Twenty four?)

Twenty four rattlesnakes. That's right. Said, "You could get all the cedar you want if you all just look out for it--look out for rattlesnakes." Boy, they took out. They had just a few about that long. They just cut the limbs you know, about that long. They just got a few. Oh his wife got scared and they just took out. He said, "We just might as well leave, I'm afraid of snakes." I guess he saw them up there in this--that was his pasture. He don't care you get it and--you know, they left, they came back they told us they came back. "Did you get lot of cedar?" They said, "Oh that man that got that place, scared us off." He said, "He scared us out of there."
