

Indians used to brew their coffee, tea--menu.

(Well, now, when those fellows came over here and you were talking about starting it up, who was here besides Frankie?)

Alfred: Well, there was Frankie and Herbert (Redbone) and Riley (Pewonopcot)--That's three that I remember well. They met several other places, but these three fellows is always there. They tried, pretty hard and finally--finally others, they kinda got interested. They start coming in.

Evelyn: David Starr, too.

Alfred: I never was hardly 'round much. I told them that "Don't get the idea that I'm not interested." But my family, they always--they like dances and different activities--hand game, or any way of having lot of fun. So that, that was beginning.

Evelyn: They had Stuart, but Stuart (Klinkole) didn't know nothing about this dance.

Alfred: Well, some of these old guys they--

Evelyn: They didn't get nothing out of them. Only one they got something out of was the Old Lady--Rose (Chaletsin).

Alfred: Well, to get back to where they start singing, you know--somehow, they rake around and got a drum. When they got that drum--

Evelyn: Your mother's the one that bought that drum.

Alfred: Well, the next thing I know--boy they had the rhythm! And finally they got together and they want to remodel some of these staffs. So they got--I don't know whose overcoat they got--but they took that to wrap around that staffs. They had two of them with a hook. The
