ten or twelve years ago. This lady, she lived with her mother-mn-law and litile boy about five years old, and her husband got killed in thewar or some - died somehow or another and this old lady always trying to get this kid, this little boy.awy froin this woman, you know. . She wee one of these doting mothers, you know, and daughter-in-law never worth anything. Well, this woman had s'ome rabbits that had been given to the little boy. But they ate tham as they - well thisold woman knew about rabbits could eat this arsnic. Well, she had got this arsnic', I donT know how, but - mell; she got it without the law - but she gave it to one of these rabbits. The little boy saw her and he thought she was hurting. the rabbit and it would be sick. So - they had a cage that they would put a ralbit in by its self if they were going to eat it later, and they had one in there. So he didn't urant nothing to happen to that rabbit.: And he got mixed up on the cages, which cage to put it in, the sick cage or the one they were going to eat and he put is in the cage where they were going to eat the rabbit. Well, this lady and the little boy went same place and the little boy had put one of the other rabbits back in this one's cage. They all looked alike you.know. You couldn't tell 'em apart. So she went/down there and she got the one she'd give the arsnic to because it was in the/cage where the place where the one was to be eaten; killed it and then cooked $/ 1 t$ and ate it. And when her daughter-in-law cane home the old lady was dead And they accused this woman of, you know, killing her mother-in-lam. Sef. The old lady had actually done that to kill her daughter-in-law. See. And dre that little boy hadn't been smart, see, his nother would have gone to the Pen. Now that's the only one I know of that, you know, died fram it. Bat I know if can happen and I've heard lots of tires, you know, stories about arsnic - ((irrevelant converstaion with the children')
